

Instructions for Authors

The text of the article should be written in a standardized text file format (.doc, .docx, .rtf), without additional formatting, Times New Roman, 12-point font, 1.5 line spacing.

The length of the article (without bibliography and abstracts) should not exceed 40,000 characters (including spaces and footnotes).

Each article should be accompanied with title, abstract (from 1000 to 2500 characters including spaces) and keywords.

The article should include a bibliography of works cited (sorted alphabetically by authors' names).

When preparing an article for publication, please follow these rules:

- foreign terms and titles in italics,
- quotes in simple font and in quotation marks,
- titles of journals in simple font and in quotation marks,
- use bolding or kerning for emphasis
- readable highlights,
- footnote number always appears before the end of the sentence (the dot ends the sentence).

FOOTNOTES

I. GENERAL RULES

1. Footnotes begin with the arabic number in the upper faction. Numbering should be carried out continuously throughout the work. Links should be placed at the bottom of the given text page, with the first letter of the author's name first, followed by the surname.

2. If the following footnote refers to a source that is already cited in the paper, the footnote should be drawn up according to the following formula:

Name initial, surname, comma, title (or abbreviation of the title), comma, op. cit., page number. The description ends with a full stop.

3. Abbreviations should be edited in simple font.

4. When quoting websites, provide a link to the page plus the date of an access.

5. Bibliographic description:

5.1. For the book entry: first name initial, last name, comma, full title in italics, comma, (possibly) translator's initial and last name, comma, name of publishing house, comma, place and year of publication, comma, and the page from which the quote or information comes from. The description ends with a full stop.

The paginations of classical texts are written in plain type directly after the title. Pagination and title are not separated by a comma.

Abbreviations of the title can be used in the following footnotes.

5.2. For an journal article: initial of the author's (authors) name, surname, comma, full title in italics, comma, title of the journal in quotation marks, comma, year of publication, number within this year, comma, page number. The description ends with a full stop.

5.3. For a chapter of the monograph: initial of name, surname, comma, full title in italics, comma, in: italic title of monograph, comma, ed. initial and surname of the editor(s), comma, name of publishing house, comma, place and date of publication, comma, page number. The description ends with a full stop.
